I would have tried to restore only the system.img, but the ROM has 30 IMG System files, System 1.img, System 2.img, System 3.img, et cetera. However, I tried something else and I got sick in the fastboot menu: there is no flash_all script in the ROM directory, but one was created by typing Python CreateFlashTool.PY. Those are executable in Windows command, but then I started my PC in Linux and inserted the following (this is partially from the memory, so it may not be 100%): dd if = / dev / zero of = ~ / SYS. IMG BS = 1M count = 1850 (1850 was found by trial and error) MKFS.EXT4 -O ^ 64 bit -B 4096 sys.img (which means 'not' 64 bit, the destination device is only 32-bit) sudo mkdir /mnt / x sudo fittings mount -t est4 -o loop sys.img / mnt / x sudo chmod 777 / mnt / x cp -r ~ / system folder / mnt / x (where the system folder Contains files to enter virtual drive) sudo umount / mnt / x img2sing sys.img system.img fastboot flash system system.img Update: Hit this stuff because it didn't work and something else did (see below). He failed (remote: the partition table does not exist) finished. I have the backup of the ROM created with Lenovo Smart Assistant. I felt it with several dongles and OFTL. Yes. 3. Last modification: 7 Jul 2019 before, I used Packsparseimg from this page: to pack all * .img file system in a single system. Last modified: 7 July 2019 yes, I have. The cyclic restart has stopped, but I return to start only in FastBoot mode. Here is my thoughts: I have the Uncompressed system, now if there is a way to make an img file from them, it would be great! You tried FastBoot FastBoot ehc onem A ~~~~~ .otinif js320.0f yako ...
