1. Phonology - The study of the sound system of a language. It includes the study of the physical production of sounds (phonetics) and the way these sounds are organized into meaningful units (phonemes).
2. Morphology - The study of the structure and formation of words. It examines how smaller units (morphemes) combine to form words and how these words change form (inflection).
3. Syntax - The study of the rules and principles that govern the arrangement of words and phrases to create well-formed sentences in a language.
4. Semantics - The study of the meaning of words and sentences. It explores how language is used to convey information and how meaning is derived from context.
5. Pragmatics - The study of how context influences the interpretation of meaning. It looks at how speakers use language in different situations and how listeners understand the intended meaning based on context.
6. Discourse Analysis - The study of how individual sentences are connected to form larger units of communication, such as paragraphs or conversations. It examines the structure and coherence of these larger units.
7. Applied Linguistics - The study of how language is used in real-world contexts, such as in education, language acquisition, and language teaching. It applies theoretical knowledge to practical language use.
